

Nobody should have to do the same thing every Sunday.

Most people have one task that never ends — the pile of paperwork that moves from the counter to the table and back, the same spreadsheet retyped every week, the renewal nobody remembered. You do not need software for that. You need the one thing built once, so it keeps happening without you.

What do you redo every single week?

If you could describe it to a person, it can usually be built once and left alone.

What falls through when life gets busy?

Renewals, appointments, bills, forms. The things that only hurt when they are missed.

What is sitting in a pile right now?

Receipts, mail, statements, school papers. Paper is the easiest thing to hand off.

WHAT IT COSTS Start with one thing.

MOST PEOPLE START HERE

One Task, One Time from $75

- Pick the single thing you keep doing by hand
- Built, handed over, and it is yours
- No monthly anything, no account to keep
- Runs on the tools you already use

OPTIONAL

Keep It Running $150 / month

- Only if you want it looked after
- Adjusted as things change
- Cancel any month, it keeps working

EXAMPLES

What People Ask For

- Receipts and bills read and filed
- Inbox sorted, real things surfaced
- Reminders that actually arrive
- Long documents cut to the point
- The same weekly message, written for you
- Photos and files named and organized

Why not just use ChatGPT yourself?

You should — for one-off questions.

If you need an answer once, type it in and go. That is free and it works.

This is for the thing you'd do forever.

Built once so it runs without being asked. The point is not having to remember it.

First one may be free. If it is small, or if it is the kind of thing I have not built before, the first one is on me — ask. Anything larger gets a price before it is built, and nothing starts until you say so.

HOW IT WORKS Three steps, no jargon

- 01 Tell me the task. In plain words — what you do, how often, and what a good result looks like. One conversation.
- 02 I tell you the price. Before anything is built, and it does not change afterwards.
- 03 You get the thing. Working, on your own accounts, with a plain-English note on how to use it.

Not included: anything I would not want my own family relying on — medical, legal, or financial decisions. Tools that sort and remind, yes. Tools that decide, no.

Straight answers

- ✓ It is yours. Built on your accounts. If we never speak again, it keeps running.
- ✓ Nothing is subscribed to on your behalf, and no data is sold anywhere.
- ✓ You do not need to be technical. If you can describe it, that is enough.
- ✓ Built here in Cullman. You can call the person who made it.
- ✓ If it turns out you do not need it, I will tell you that instead of selling it.

Built one at a time, so there is a limit on how many I take at once. The honest next step is a short conversation about one thing.

What would you stop doing?

Tell me the one task you are tired of. You will get a price before anything is built.
